The sensitive eye of Sondeep Shankar, one of India's finest photographers, and the lucid prose of the distinguished diplomat, Gurbachan Singh, make this a book for everyone, whether fourteen or forty. The origins and evolution of the faith, the basic philosophy, moral code, social and religious structures, ceremonies and folk – their land and lives, festivals, martyrs and heroes – are all covered in this intimately illustrated account. The work and insights of recent scholarship are incorporated in a story that is never dry and frequently profound.
